Sequester cuts will hit New York hard

► Education sees $42.7 million cut in New York, with 590 teachers losing their jobs ► Cuts would also affect child care programs, senior citizens, public housing and Hurricane Sandy aid
► Up to 100,000 workers could lose jobs, according to study

Major New York state and city programs will take an immediate hit of $3.4 million in funding from nationwide budget cuts, starting on Friday, March 1, according to numbers released by the White House. And that's only the beginning of a series of cuts over nine months that will affect everything from child care programs to senior citizens to public housing and Sandy aid. The cuts come as part of the so-called sequester, an automatic $85 trillion reduction in national spending cuts, that goes into effect today. The sequester was part of the 2011 debt ceiling debate. As part of that agreement, if the government failed to cut $1 trillion from the debt, automatic spending cuts would go into effect.

"Financially it will not be as impactful on the state government as it would be on individuals because it's more assistance that goes to individuals," Gov. Andrew Cuomo said.

The state's financial plan for dealing with the sequester estimates New

Subway pusher fit to stand trial

A woman who faces multiple counts of murder after she pushed an innocent man in front of an oncoming train in December was found fit for trial.

Erika Menendez, 31, killed Sunando Sen, 46, at a 7 train station in Sunnyside, Queens. She said she pushed him because he looked Muslim. Sen was not Muslim.

Her attorney has entered a not-guilty plea on her behalf.

'Cannibal Cop' buddy arrested

A man arrested by British police on child porn charges last week may be connected to the former city cop on trial this week for planning to kidnap and eat women, the New York Post reported. The defendant, Gilberto Valle, 28, dubbed the "Cannibal Cop," discussed kidnapping his college classmate with "Moody Blues" online, court documents showed. Moody Blues was identified as the man arrested in Britain. In the online chats, Moody

Six-year-old killed on way to school

A 6-year-old boy was killed by a tractor-trailer in East Harlem on Thursday morning while the nearest crossing guard was taking a break.

The boy was crossing First Avenue on his way to school with his 9-year-old brother when the vehicle turned right off of 117th Street and struck him, police said. They were half a block from P.S. 155.

He was rushed to Harlem Hospital, where he was pronounced dead from severe head injuries.

His identity is being withheld until the family can be notified. The older brother was unharmed.

The crossing guard was in tears as she told 1010 WINS that she had stepped away from her post for a five-minute bathroom break. The truck driver didn't realize he had hit anyone until witnesses flagged him down, police told the NY Post.

He returned to the scene and was not charged. NYPD said in a statement that "there is no criminality suspected at this time."

Council lowers fines on city street vendors

► Street vendors thank Council Speaker Christine Quinn with a poster after the city council vote.

Dozens of street vendors gathered today in a show of support for Speaker Christine Quinn as the City Council voted to lower the maximum fines for vendors, who have fought for years against fines that can threaten their livelihoods.

The legislation will cut the maximum fine from $1,000 to $500 for violations of the city's sidewalk codes. The Street Vendor Project of the Urban Justice Center said the fines have long been disproportionate "for minor infractions unrelated to health and safety, such as being inches too close to a doorway."

Last week, Mayor Michael Bloomberg criticized Quinn for "one of the stupider" laws he's ever heard and said he would veto the bill. SVP indicated that it expected to have the City Council's support to override the veto.

New Yorks back Styrofoam ban, oppose large soda ban

GETTY IMAGES

► Take the Styrofoam cups, but leave our large sodas alone.

A majority of New Yorkers support Mayor Michael Bloomberg's proposed ban on Styrofoam containers, but are less supportive of his ban on large soda, according to a new poll.

The Quinnipiac University poll found that New York City voters support a potential plastic foam ban 69 percent to 26 percent. But when asked about the ban that prohibits the sale of sugary drinks larger than 16 ounces, New Yorkers are opposed 51 percent to 46 percent.

Opposition was especially strong among black voters. They oppose the drink ban 60 percent to 38 percent. The poll also found that more men oppose the ban than women do.

The ban on sugary drinks goes into effect March 12.

A ban on plastic foam would force food places who use Styrofoam to replace their containers. Foam trays in school cafeterias would also be eliminated. ● LAURA SHIN

Benedict: I'll obey next pope

VATICAN CITY. Pope Benedict left the Vatican on Thursday after pledging unconditional obedience to whomever succeeds him to guide the Roman Catholic Church at one of the most crisis-ridden periods in its 2,000-year history.

The first pope in six centuries to step down, Benedict flew off in a white Italian air force helicopter for the papal summer villa south of the capital where he took up temporary residence.

Bells rang out from St Peter's Basilica and churches all over Rome as the helicopter circled Vatican City and flew over the Colosseum and other landmarks to give the pontiff one last view of the city where he is also bishop. REUTERS

Bob Woodward 'threatened by White House'

WASHINGTON. A prominent Washington journalist said in interviews on Wednesday that a senior White House official warned him he would "regret" publishing a story challenging the White House's account of how the idea for automatic spending cuts originated.

Bob Woodward said in interviews with Politico and CNN that when he informed the White House he was writing a story critical of the White House's handling of a debate over the origin of the cuts, known as sequestration, the official reacted angrily.

The aide "yelled at me for about a half hour," Woodward told Politico, and then followed up the tirade with an e-mail. REUTERS

THE FIRST CUT IS THE DEEPEST

I'm not a veterinarian, and unless journalism goes completely to hell, I don't plan on ever becoming one. As much as I love animals, I'm not suited for the work, if only because whenever someone begins a sentence with, "I have a pet cat ..." I reflexively reply with: "Good heavens, why?"

But here is a lesson I suspect every aspiring vet learns in Bad Moves 101: If the zoo calls you to come castrate a bear, you should expect the patient to offer some resistance. It is a lesson that would resonate in Washington, D.C., these days. In department after department, the claws have been unsheathed, the lips have been curled back over the fangs, and cabinet members are furiously roaring that any cuts to their budgets will bring the end of life on earth as we know it.

CNN-POLITICS

Quoted

Lopping off up to 10 percent of any agency's budget almost certainly will force some hard decisions and painful reductions in services.

But the evidence of the past few weeks suggests the administration is exaggerating just how dire the situation might be. The education secretary said teachers were already losing their jobs, but then could produce no credible examples of where this has happened. The transportation secretary said his reduced budget would lead to delays in travel and chaos in the airports, all while ignoring that the new budget is virtually the same as his budget in 2008, when there were actually more people flying. And the attorney general pulled a similar stunt, saying the country will be "less safe" if his department has to work with the same amount of money it had just a few years back.

Still, all of this has less to do with the sequester than with a natural law in D.C.: Government agencies never accept budget cuts at any level without protest, whether Democrats or Republicans are in charge. Like an angry bear protecting itself, this is the nature of the beast.

You mentioned on Twitter recently that you were dismayed to not see more promotion for "The Impossible," which could've used a better marketing push.

► I just didn't see any posters, that was all. I was commenting on the fact that I was driving around and I was seeing lots of "Jack the Giant Killer" posters, but there weren't any posters for "the Impossible." Not in the States, not that I saw anyway. That might've helped.

Ned Ehrbar
METRO WORLD NEWS

Interview

"He's a really talented director and really knowledgeable about film, and really can break down stories and characters and understands how to move a story forward at all times. He's fantastic in the X-Men world, really understands it. I haven't spoken to him in-depth about this next one yet, but I know he's really excited about it, and that's a great sign. I'm looking forward to playing that role again."

— Nicholas Hoult on going back to work with "Jack the Giant Slayer" director Bryan Singer again with "X-Men: Days of Future Past."

Ewan McGregor gets his daring-do on for director Bryan Singer in "Jack the Giant Slayer," playing a knight who's forthright and heroic — to a fault — as he and Jack (Nicholas Hoult) try to rescue a princess from the aforementioned giants. But McGregor's inspiration for the character may surprise you.

You look fantastic in this movie. It seems like you haven't aged in the last 10 years. What gives?

[Laughs] I don't have a secret to that, I'm afraid. When you're presented with a forthright knight character, how do you approach that?

I don't know, it's a pretty understandable character. It's a sort of classic role. It's not something new, really. I just played what was on the page. It's very well and clearly written in the script. And I liked the hu-

MCGREGOR'S 'GIANT' NEW ROLE

► The 'Jack the Giant Slayer' co-star on playing a knight, reuniting (again) with his 'Trainspotting' co-star Ewan Bremner and the thin marketing campaign for 'The Impossible'

mor. I thought the humor that was in the writing was very good. I like the fact that he's sort of very gung-ho but very often doesn't quite get things right, and then Jack has to come along behind him and tidy things up. Sort of like a "Hong Kong Phooey"-type style. That cartoon was one of my main sources of research, "Hong Kong Phooey."

The film very carefully walks that line of appealing to both kids and adults. I think that's right. It lies in exactly the right place for a film that's being made for a family to watch. Very often these days you take your kids to films and there's inappropriate language or sexual jokes that are very clearly aimed for the parents. You don't want your kids seeing that, or at least I don't. But this is absolutely something that you could take your family to see and you wouldn't find yourself in any awkward moments with your kids, you know? It's a classic sort of family movie.

It's nice to see you working with your "Trainspotting" co-star Ewan Bremner again.

We did "Black Hawk Down" together and then we did another film called "Perfect Sense" together, so this is the fourth film that we've made together. I'm always happy to work with him because he's a great actor, Ewan. I like working with him very much. But yeah, four films we've made together now, so it'll be interesting to see what the next one is. We don't have anything planned that I know of.

'Oldboy' director hits America

South Korean director Park Chan-wook isn't terribly known outside of fan-boy circles, but his reputation is secure thanks mostly to the hammer-wielding, octopus-slurping genre-grinder "Oldboy." Traditionally a cult hit from a foreign filmmaker leads to a dispiriting American stint, but Park is too much a stylist to get ground up by the Hollywood machine. His English-language debut, "Stoker," finds him in the United States but working on its margins. It's a serial killer pic, but a Park Chan-wook serial killer pic, which is to say it's obsessed not with plot or even grisly murders but with visual design, outre ideas and a hothouse atmosphere, no doubt gleaned from watching too many American movies.

It's a good thing the filmmaker doesn't care about plot, because it's not "Stoker"'s strongest point. Park decided his first American film should be the first produced script co-written by Wentworth Miller, the star of "Prison Break." A teenager with the loaded name of India Stoker (Mia Wasikowska) loses her father in a car accident (allegedly!). The funeral brings forth mysterious uncle Charles (Matthew Goode), who intrigues her first with his handsomeness and sex appeal, and then by revealing that he likes to snap necks with his belt.

Of course, there are twists, but Smith's script also goes to some weird places: India has the hot for her uncle, as does her widowed mom (Nicole Kidman, underused but reliably intense), and she soon finds herself turned on by his blasé treatment of other people's lives, leading to a genuinely out-there shower scene.

Park grasps onto these elements as tightly as he can, doing his best to obscure the silly story with an array of fetishistic phantasmagoria. Park's images, as ever, are fussy and borderline (and often actually) OCD. It's not just him showing off (although it's that, too): The power of surfaces is an idea that tends to be built into his narratives. "Sympathy for Lady Vengeance" finds a woman with hot crimson eye shadow whose aggressively stylized revenge masks deeper trauma.

Still, despite amplifying its transgressive bits, Park proves unable to get deeper into the script, and frankly seems bored by its machinations. "Stoker" seems like a placeholder, an excuse to work out his pet themes and talents before a project captures his complete attention.

Review

'21 & Over'

Grade: BBB+

"21 & Over" feels like a reincarnation of last year's equally asinine "Project X," a movie that, like this one, was loaded with revolting characters and implausible scenarios that revolve around a night of partying.

The plot is painfully simple: Accompanied by best friends Casey (the charming Skylar Astin) and Miller (Miles Teller), supposed brainiac Jeff Chang (Justin Chon) ignores his father's command not to go out on the night before his med-school interview. Naturally, the three get sloshed, particularly Jeff, who is comatose as Casey and Miller race to get him home in time for his dad's arrival.

Along the way, we're forced to endure the sight of slow-motion vomiting, Jeff eating a tampon and the characters finding the inevitable opportunity to fight, call the friendship quits and then (yawn) realize how foolish they've been. It's the standard version of the hyperbolic college-party movie, except without the wit of "Old School" or the lovability of "Animal House."

Commercial fishing in the (blurry) spotlight

CINEMA GUILD

'Leviathan'

Director: Lucien Castaing-Taylor and Verena Paravel

Genre: Documentary

Grade: BBB+

Lars von Trier shot his 2006 comedy "The Boss of It All" with a camera strapped to a robot. The method was called "Automavision": After von Trier lined up his shots, the computer system adjusted them randomly — reframing the image so actors' body parts were cut off, slightly adjusting the angle so the lighting was different, going out of focus, etc.

Von Trier's visual randomness has nothing on "Leviathan," a doc-of-sorts from Lucien Castaing-Taylor and Verena Paravel. Castiang-Taylor's previous film was "Sweetgrass," a look at sheep and shepherds whose approach was decidedly minimalist. "Leviathan" goes even deeper into abstraction. If we learned very little about the life of shepherds (and their sheep), you learn nothing about the commercial fishers on relentlessly rocking boats in the North Atlantic.

There is no narration, no music, not even context, and what dialogue we hear is indecipherable above the waves, squeaky rust and precipitation. Most of "Leviathan" was "shot" with the GoPro, a tiny, durable, waterproof camera. These were attached to the sides of fishermen or thrown out to sea. Images are blurred into visual vomit and frequently impossible to parse. There's no overt message, and Paravel has said even she doesn't know what the film is "about." This is a good thing, and at its best, "Leviathan" is a purely avant-garde work — a flurry of unrecognizable colors and shapes. The few times it seems to be saying something — and "Leviathan" often does for fish what Georges Franju's notorious 1949 doc "Blood of the Beasts" did for cows — are the film at its worst. Relatively speaking, of course.

Miles Teller: Will not kiss a man happily

Miles Teller, the star of "21 & Over," will do a lot of things for the sake of comedy — but kissing a man really wasn't on the list.

"The [guy-on-guy] kissing scene was something I tried to get rid of for a while," he told Metro reporter Ned Ehbar on an interview about the new film about a 21st birthday getting out of control. "I was literally, like, pretty upset about that. And then we did it and it was just like CPR. ... Inevitably, I did it for comedy. But they wanted me to use the tongue and I said, 'Nope. It's not that funny, man.'"

First of all, Miles, you're wrong: Tongue is totally that funny. Second, your attitude is literally, like, pretty homophobic. This is acting — everyone knows you're pretending.

But it gets weirder. Apparently, Teller didn't mind being spanked on film with his male co-star, Skylar Astin. "There was a point where me and Skylar were shackled up and were getting spanked. At one point the shackle broke, so I had to bend over and fix it and there were all these girls around, and I was just like, 'I'm sorry.' Then I just went down and fixed it."

So yes to two bros, pants down, gettin' spanked on film? But no on kissing? Weird.

JOHN JOHNSON

► Miles Teller will do a lot of things for comedy ... as long as it doesn't involve tongue.

Stewart stops Sanders advancements

Now that she's ruined his marriage, Kristen Stewart wants nothing to do with Rupert Sanders. "Rupert's reached out to Kristen, but she doesn't want anything to do with him," a source tells Radar Online. She regrets ever getting involved with Rupert because of how much it hurt Robert [Pattinson] and the amount of backlash."

Don't mess with Viking women

► Katheryn Winnick and Jessalyn Gilsig, stars of 'The Vikings,' talk about playing strong female characters in the new series on The History Channel

The mental image that comes to mind when you hear "Vikings" is usually bearded oafs drinking from skull cups in between fits of plundering. "People think they were just barbarians with horns on their heads," says Katheryn Winnick, one of the stars of "The Vikings," a new nine-episode docu-drama that airs Sundays on The History Channel. "That's completely wrong. They were civilized, intelligent, sophisticated."

The show is the latest from Michael Hirst, known for his way of turning history into highly watchable, often sexy trash, as he did in the "Elizabeth" films, "The Tudors" and "The Borgias." His new show tells of Ragnar Lothbakk (Travis Fimmel), a real-life Viking badass. But the

was that they were partners," Winnick says. "It was true love."

For Gilsig, best known as Terri Schuester on "Glee," it was a chance to play evil again, this time alongside her TV husband.

"This was a team effort," she says of the two characters. "This is a couple that has come to the highest position, and now they have to figure out how to keep it. You have to do that by identifying your enemies and any threat you have, and eliminating them."

The secret to playing a villain is believing the character is right, Gilsig says. "Your job as an actor is to always make sense to yourself. Even a serial killer makes sense to themselves."

Intersecting narratives in dueling ICP exhibits

► Two new exhibits at ICP present the life's work of two photojournalists whose works pulse with life close to death

Master a classic

Weekend recipe

Pasta carbonara with peas

The key to this simple weeknight meal is cooking the eggs just enough to make a creamy sauce without overcooking them. So first, crisp the pancetta; then, while the pasta cooks, mix the eggs with the pecorino and parmesan cheeses. While the drained pasta is still hot, toss it with the cooked pancetta and eggs. This method provides enough gentle heat to create a creamy, rich sauce and virtually eliminates the chance of scrambling the eggs. The addition of peas adds a touch of brightness to this classic Italian dish.

INGREDIENTS

- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 6 ounces pancetta, small dice
- Kosher salt
- 1 pound linguine
- 3 large eggs
- 2 large egg yolks
- ½ cup grated Pecorino

What to buy

Look for pancetta in gourmet groceries and Italian markets. Or you can make your own. In a pinch, you can substitute bacon.

- Romano cheese (about 1½ ounces), plus extra for serving
- ¼ cup grated Parmigiano-Reggiano cheese (about ¾ ounce)
- 1 cup frozen peas, thawed
- ½ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper, plus more as needed

INSTRUCTIONS

1 Heat the oil in a large frying pan over medium heat until shimmering. Add the pancetta and cook, stirring often, until browned and most of the fat has been rendered, about 12 to 14 minutes. Remove the pan from the heat and set aside.

2 Bring a large pot of salted water to a boil. Cook the pasta according to the package directions. Meanwhile, whisk together the eggs and yolks in a medium bowl until combined. Add the cheeses and whisk until evenly combined; set aside.

3 Drain the cooked pasta, reserving half cup of the cooking water, and immediately return the hot pasta to the pot. Stir in the reserved egg-cheese mixture, reserved pancetta and pan drippings, peas, measured pepper and just enough pasta cooking water to make the mixture creamy (you may not need all of it). Taste and season with additional pepper as needed.

4 Transfer the pasta to a serving dish and serve immediately, passing the extra grated cheeses on the side.

► Peas add some bright color to this pasta carbonara recipe.

Beverage pairing

2005 Pallavicini Frascati: Think bright, crisp and white. A delicate Frascati from the volcanic soils near Rome would be the perfect complement to cut through the richness of this traditional Roman pasta.

Get Rid of Painful Varicose Veins During a Lunch Break!

Eliminate painful, unsightly varicose veins, skin changes or even ulcers with Endovenous Laser Therapy (EVLT).

Advantages of Endovenous Laser Therapy (EVLT):

- Relief of Symptoms and Leg Pain;
 - Short procedure (15 minutes);
 - No surgery;
 - No down time;
 - No general anesthesia;
 - No hospitalization required.
- The procedure is performed at our clinic;
- Resumption of normal activities right away;
 - Covered by Medicare and most insurance plans.

Do Not Postpone Treatment

Varicose veins can start out as a seemingly small problem, but left untreated, can become much more serious. Complications of varicose veins may include ulcers. These may form on the skin near the affected veins, particularly near the ankles. They are caused by fluid build-up in the dysfunctional veins, and can be extremely painful.

Dysfunctional veins can also increase the risk of blood clots. Patients may experience a swelling in the leg, which may indicate a blood clot. Left untreated, these clots can travel through the bloodstream and lodge near the heart or lungs, causing potentially life-threatening health problems.

If you have already decided you'd like to receive vein treatments or would like to get a diagnosis, simply schedule an appointment with USA Vein Clinics today by calling 718-732-0231.

Williams thinks chemistry with Johnson growing

► Backcourt still trying to find footing ► Both could be in lineup Friday ► Williams on a tear

Deron Williams played his best game of the year Tuesday night in New Orleans when he scored 33 points.

The one caveat was that Joe Johnson was not in the backcourt with Williams. With Johnson sitting out the last three games due to a sore left heel, Williams has been able to assume some of the responsibilities as the game's closer — a role Johnson has performed to near perfection this season.

The Nets are hopeful Johnson will return Friday night against Dallas, especially after how he and Williams performed in practice on Thursday.

"We're still working on [our chemistry]," Williams said. "It's something that we're going to continue to work on and get better as it goes. I said it before I've never played with a guy like Joe, so it takes adjustments. We're used to having the ball in our hands for the majority of the time, so now it's kind of one of those things."

Williams is shooting 19-of-36 in 79 minutes over his last two games and interim head coach P.J. Carlesimo does not believe the surge is a fluke.

"I think the shooting is real," Carlesimo said. "I mean he's shooting the ball extremely well, he's moving, he's moving well [and] he's attacking. We've not actually sat down and asked him, but clearly he's had to do more the last couple games, in terms of creating offense not just for other guys but also for himself."

"He looks good, he looks comfortable [and] he's played big minutes," Carlesimo said. "We rested him a little bit the other night but he's playing big minutes and he's playing very well which is all encouraging."

Brady vs. Sanchez: Tale of QB contract tape

It's a tale of two cities and, more aptly, a tale of two quarterbacks.

Earlier this week, the Patriots made a very Patriots-like move, re-signing Tom Brady to a deal that not only ensures the greatest quarterback of his generation will retire in New England, but a deal that also frees up cap space to keep star players in place around him. Down in New York, reports surfaced out of the NFL Combine that Jets receiver Antonio Holmes would not consider restructuring his own long-term deal to help create cap space.

Inexplicably, Jets quarterback Mark Sanchez was given a contract extension last March, just a couple weeks prior to the team trading for Tim Tebow. The deal was given by then general manager Mike Tannenbaum even though Sanchez was coming off a season of regression and had two years left on his rookie deal.

Metro looks at the ugly details:

► Original salary (2013):
Brady: $21.8 million
Sanchez: $12.8 million

► New salary (2013):
Brady: $13.8 million
Sanchez: $12.8 million

► TDs/INTs (2012):
Brady: 34/13
Sanchez: 18/8

► Butt fumbles (2012):
Brady: zero
Sanchez: one

DiPietro clarifies suicide quotes

Islanders goalie Rick DiPietro admitted to being frustrated, but wanted to make it clear on Thursday he has never actually considered suicide.

A reporter for Long Island's News 12 tweeted DiPietro thought about "killing himself at one point" after an interview with the struggling player. DiPietro clarified those comments on Thursday, saying his comment in the interview was that if it wasn't for his wife he might have driven "into a tree." He said it was simply to show how supportive his wife has been.

The goalie was put on waivers by the Islanders last week.

Sports in brief

Kreider sent down to AHL

NHL. Rangers prospect Chris Kreider has been given the New York to Hartford bus a workout.

Kreider took the trip back to the Connecticut Whale on Thursday as the team made room for Rick Nash, who is returning from injury.

The 22-year-old forward was sent down for the second time after starting the season with the big club. Kreider broke out in last season's playoffs — before ever playing a regular-season game — but hasn't had much of an impact so far in 2013.

Kreider has just two points (one goal, one assist) on the season and hasn't had any points in his last six games.

Rivera throws first simulated spring game

MLB. It was only 18 pitches and it wasn't against actual competition, but Mariano Rivera returned to the mound on Thursday to field his position for the first time.

The Yankees' closer is coming back from a torn right ACL, so Rivera wanted to practice taking groundballs, bunts and covering first base before getting into actual game action.

"It feels good, guys, it feels real good," Rivera told reporters in Yankees spring training. "It was perfect."
